FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

What should we expect?

We don't play music with explicit lyrics (unless you want that). We won't talk on the mic the whole night. You'll deal with just us from the first meeting to the final dance. You'll have our cell number to call anytime. You won't hear something you told us not to play. You'll hear names pronounced correctly during introductions. All our gear is professionally presented. Our equipment will perform properly. You will see us wearing the appropriate attire to your event. You will see us dedicated to our task. The success of your event is our mission.

Why pick you over another larger company?

First and foremost you get to actually see the DJ you'll be booking - Andrew. It's our personal relationship that makes your event great. Second, we are able to keep a real close eye on quality. Our clients come back because they like the personal touch they don't get from the bigger companies. We have one complete set of gear to look after - we buy the highest quality. Often, larger companies have many setups to rent out, and go with low to mid-grade equipment.

Do you have our special song?

Yes, though you may stump us from time to time, we have too much music to list. The conversations we'll have prior to your reception assures you that we'll have your special songs and anything else you desire.

What kind of music do you play?

The long and short of it - whatever gets the people at your event dancing. We want what you want - people having fun. The more they dance to a particular genre, the more likely we are to keep playing it. Whether it's 70's, 90's, 2010's, current, rock, classic rock, electronic or hip hop - whatever it takes to get them up and moving.

What if you get sick?

Andrew is a veteran in the industry. He has many DJ's in his contacts and short of an accident en-route that left him hospitalized on the day of your event, he will be there for you. In fact, Andrew even performed at an event only a week after having bi-lateral pneumonia! This is a small personal DJ service where we establish a relationship of integrity, trust and concern toward a great outcome.
